PRISONER TAKES STAND

seemed back in his chair, resting his head on the back of it and gazed his eyes, looking thoughtfully so that his little, soft, reddish cheeks puckered before he answered the question.

"GILLETTE A MORAL COWARD."

Senator Mills of counsel for Gillette, made the usual motion for the discharge of the prisoner, which was denied by Judge Devendorf.

Arthur Thomas, senior counsel for Gillette, made the usual motion for the discharge of the prisoner, which was denied by Judge Devendorf.

"Gentlemen, there are some things in this case which are not to be overlooked. There will be no suggestion of the evidence here. There will be an open and frank statement. We will give you everything."

"If you want to hear the statement of Grace Brown's death from the lips of the man who was with her at the time, I will tell you. And if there was any power that could cure you would have been paid for Gillette's life."

The prisoner was then, at 11:30, summoned to the witness stand and the direct examination began.

Roofers' Protective Union.

Declaring that the agitation for biennial elections is born of Tory logic and would tend to strengthen the Roofs' Protective Union, the organizations adopted a strong set of resolutions at a meeting at No. 16 Rookwood street, endorsing the proposal to have the General and State officers elected every two years instead of yearly.

The resolution sets as follows:
"The agitation for biennial elections is born of Tory logic, and would tend to strengthen the Roofs' Protective Union, which is a known enemy of the labor movement. Biennial elections would give the Roofs' Protective Union a more powerful voice in the labor movement, and would tend to strengthen the Roofs' Protective Union, which is a known enemy of the labor movement."

BARGAIN FRIDAY At New England's Finest SHOPPING CENTRE

THE FOLLOWING METHODS WILL BE CONTINUED RIGHT THROUGH THE HOLIDAY SEASON, AND THOSE WHO DESIRE MAY SAVE ENORMOUSLY DURING THE TIME WHEN EXPENDITURES ARE THE HEAVIEST OF THE YEAR.

WE have ever told you how every value is rigidly inspected before it is allowed to go into our advertisement, just as you would inspect it before buying? We call it merchandising. But we merchandise the article according to our customers' standpoint. For instance, if we say a coat is worth $25 and we're going to sell it for $15 it must have an intrinsic value to you of $25.00 or more—it must be a style and quality that will give you a full $25 worth of service. We value the confidence of the public in this great store, as evidenced by the increasing crowds, and in order to maintain that confidence we will offer every day superior qualities and distinctive styles that have never before been identified with our famous low prices. We give the people of Boston and New England an opportunity to save enormously on the finest merchandise. We can do this with our great organization of four of America's leading stores to back up any broad based movement we inaugurate. When we offer you two or three times your money's worth you can depend upon it you'll get it, no matter what sacrifice we have to make.

Being closed all day tomorrow we have marked prices lower and made all preparations for doubling our usual bargain Friday business. This announcement is so important and the values so numerous and sensational that we publish them Wednesday evening and Thursday morning in order to give the public ample time to consider them carefully.

A poor facto

60 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, NOVEMBER 28, 1906

A poor factory girl, uneducated, but not IGNORANT, put her SOUL into a series of letters to her worthless lover. The result was that no FICTION ever written has ever taken such strong hold of the great audience the unhappy girl

The world is full of tragedies as PROFOUND and SOUL STIRRING as any that Shakespeare took for his subjects. Each day's news has its stories of human emotion, of human suffering, of strong, resistless currents of feeling that move others as we know they would move US were we the sufferers instead of those who figure in the news.

But often the TELLING of them lacks IMAGINATION. Almost always it lacks SOUL.

And until one of the poor, hapless victims of such inhuman brutality as that suffered by Grace Brown is reached the reader skims through the pages of his morning paper, never dreaming that here are GREATHER APPEALS TO HIS SYMPATHIES and imagination than can possibly be written in any book or acted in any play.

WHATSOEVER IS HUMAN IS INTERESTING, whether it is Lear's sad questioning why a horse, a RAT, should have life, and his daughter have none, or Grace Brown telling of her farewell visit to the old well with the green moss massed around it.

It is not always possible to have our news told us by a Grace Brown or a Bunyan. In the hurry of making a daily paper often the SOUL of a story is crowded out.

But if we use our own IMAGINATION as we read, if we try to put ourselves in the places of the unfortunates who feel the same pain, are torn by the same sorrows and fall prey to the same despair that often comes to us, we shall better understand the rest of the world, and better APPRECIATE THE DUTY OF THE FORTUNATE TO TRY TO MAKE THE WORLD HAPPIER TO THOSE WHO ARE DOOMED ONLY TO KNOW ITS TROUBLES.

Although It Makes an Inexperienced
Reader's Blood Boil to Hear Them
Called So

boil now and then. Most people do not allow their blood TO BOIL OFF-TEN ENOUGH.

But sympathy with bookmakers is wasted. All professional gamblers are, as every one ought to know, PROFESSIONAL THIEVES.

The game they play gives them as big an UNFAIR PERCENTAGE AS THE LOADED DICE IN A GAMBLING HOUSE GIVE THE PROPRIETOR OF THAT INSTITUTION.

The bookmakers have EXPERT knowledge of the odds they lay, which they acquire in many subterranean ways that are inaccessible to their victims.

Their odds are not fair odds. AND IF BOOKMAKERS WERE AS HONEST AS THEIR SYMPATHETIC FRIEND BELIEVES THEM THEY WOULD NOT PRETEND THAT THEY WERE FAIR.

Our indignant critic with the boiling blood probably does not know that ALL BOOKMAKERS VIOLATE THE LAW WHEN THEY MAKE BOOKS AT THE RACE TRACKS, AND THAT THEY PAY THE GENTLEMANLY PROPRIETORS OF THE TRACK LARGE SUMS OF MONEY FOR PROTECTING THEM IN BREAKING IT.

He does not know, apparently, that the bookmakers have to pay their assistants far more than their services are worth, BECAUSE A DISHONEST CALLING ALWAYS HAS TO PAY BIGGER WAGES OR NO ONE WOULD FOLLOW IT.

MEN PREFER TO BE HONEST, for which let us be thankful. They must be TEMPTED by bookmakers, burglars, directors of grafting corporations and other criminals before they will put their SAFETY in jeopardy, if they care nothing about their souls.

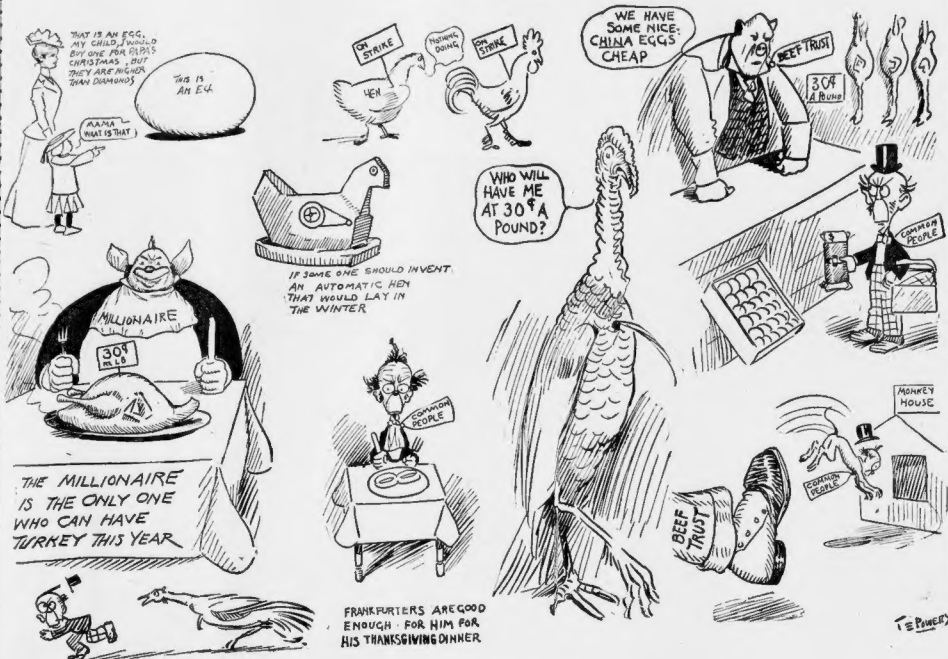

In his letter the hot-blooded young person says that if he wants to bet with a bookmaker it is as much his own affair as if he wanted to trade at a grocery store.

Weak-minded people, who have not the perception to know when they are being fleeced, should be protected from thieves.

So far as our utterances on the subject of bookmakers are concerned, our reader's blood must continue to boil until EXPERIENCE, which must come in time, shall teach him that the fires of his sympathy and indignation have been burning under the wrong battle.

and indignation has been burning under the wrong kettle. There is abundant need in this world for men whose blood CAN boil. The sight of the little, pitiful children that are being murdered every day for no reason for lack of ice or coal is a thing that OUGHT TO SEND ALL HUMANITY'S BLOOD TO THE BOILING POINT. Unnecessary distress, grief wantonly inflicted, suffering imposed by young man to far better purpose than perfectly proper and accurate classification of race track gamblers as THIEVES.

THEN mighty heroes loose before us,
 The petty great men of the day seen small,
 Like pigmies standing in a island of light
 Around the grim and giant of the day;
 War, with its bloody and horrible hand,
 Reveals the hidden weakness of a land;
 And shows the nation's strength is made
 Of men whose honor is a thing of dust,
 And turns the soubretil full on many a place
 Whom we had thought to be of noble lineage,
 Oh, lovely Peace! as thou art fair, be wise:
 Demand great men and great men shall arise
 So do thy bidding, Peace, and thou shalt see
 Swift at the call of bugle and of drum,
 So at the voice of Peace, imperious
 As bugle and of drum, the men to live
 For country and for thee. In every land,
 In every age, men are what thine demand,
 Around the throne of Peace, the men to live
 They need not rush in front of death-charged guns,
 They gather in their hearts to prove their worth.
 The grandeur of the world is in their hands,
 Were fowled souls who did not seek the fray,
 Were fowled souls who did not seek the way
 Of selfish labor for a suffering world,
 Beneath our glorious flag again unfurled,
 The victors of the world, the victors of the day,
 Called into bloodless action, Peace, by thee,
 In thou insistent in thy stern demand,
 In thou insistent in thy stern demand,
 In thou insistent in thy stern demand.

"It is good to give thanks." So at least allows the suggestion that thankfulness is not a matter of time and place. "It is good to give thanks" — ALWAYS.

Every year, at this season, we are bidden by President and Governor to follow the good custom established by the first white settlers of Massachusetts.

the first white settlers of Massachusetts: to give thanks for the blessings of God, the bounties of Nature, and sympathizing and stimulating daily and constantly the individual sense of Gratefulness.

It is indeed not to be thankful. We say of a certain type of person that he is "an ungrateful cur." But that is hard on the dog—for I have never known a dog not to be thankful. It is always his tail and every other means of utterance at his command to express appreciation of favors received.

it is to give thanks, in just so many words. The courteous custom is a fine one which has made the phrase "Thank You" a beautiful commonplace. We cannot say the words too often—they mean them too much.

Those who hold thanksgiving services are not necessarily more appreciative of their blessings than those who abstain from such public professions.
